2. (a) Read the following passage and answer the questions given below :

Of men's earliest inventions we know very little. The first may have been the use of a stone to crack a nut. The next was possibly the use of a stick to strike an enemy. Once man found that stick and stone were useful, it was only a step further to the making of a rude weapon by fastening a stone to the end string.

Man used stick and stone long before he dared to meddle with fire. Fire, of course, existed, for lightening must some times have set the forest ablaze as just it does today: and in those days volcanoes were much more active than they now are. The forgotten hero who first dared to tame fire to his own use was the greatest of early inventors, for once had fire he was the master of all lower creatures.
