Interdependence is and ought to be as much an ideal of man as self sufficiency. Man is a social being and without interrelation with others he cannot realize his oneness or suppress his egotism. If a man is so placed that he could be absolutely above all dependence on his fellow beings he would become proud and arrogant and be a burden on society. Dependence on society teaches him a lesson on humility and humanity. A man ought to be able to satisfy most of his essential needs himself is obvious but it is no less obvious that when self sufficiency is carried to the extent of isolating oneself from the society it almost amounts to sin. A man cannot become independent in respect of all operations i.e. from growing of cotton to spinning of yarn. He has to at some stage or the other take the aid of his family and if he can do so then why cannot he take the help of his neighbours, otherwise what is the significance of the statement that the world is a family.

4. (a) Read the following passage and answer the following questions :

By National Integration it is meant to bring the people of the country together to form a single whole. It also implies removing all the differences and conflicts that divide the people into various groups and sections. Integration is based on the sentiment that we are all one and this makes us proud of our heritage and binds all the people into one common bond. National Integration is a very strong force that creates unbreakable ties amongst the people. This positive sentiments helps the people in developing an outlook which is free from narrow considerations and selfish interests. It encourages people to work for the welfare, peace and prosperity of the country as a whole. 'India is our country and we belong to it' is the very basis of this sentiment. India is a big country inhabited by people belonging to different regions and following different religions, speaking different languages. History shows that there has always been a common bond that unites and binds the people together. 'Unity in Diversity' is the most important feature of Indian civilization and culture but today regionalism, communalism and narrow linguism are showing their ugly faces in many parts of India.
